You are investing money in a company. Initially, you bought $1,000 of stock. But you also buy new stock continuously through online trading at a rate of $10 per day. The market value of the stock in this company is happily increasing steadily at a rate of .01 percent a day. What is the market value of your stock at the end of one year if all this continues without interruption?